In accordance with the Higher Education Opportunity Act of 2008 (HEOA), each postsecondary institution that participates in Title IV federal student aid programs must post a net price calculator on its website that uses institutional data to provide estimated net price information to current and prospective students and their families based on a student's individual circumstances. The net price calculator is required for all Title IV institutions that enroll full-time, first-time degree- or certificate-seeking undergraduate students. Questions about institutional tuition, fees, and net prices should be directed to the individual institutions.

We provide links to each institution's net price calculators on the Alabama Transfers website under PARTICIPATING INSTITUTIONS. Click on INSTITUTION link, then click on NET PRICE CALCULATOR link.

HOW TO AVOID THESE 5 COMMON TRANSFER STUDENT MISTAKES

By Ashley Hueber - Assistant Director of Transfer Admission, Aurora University

Link to article

Below we provide only a summary and excerpts from the original article.

The transfer process presents unique challenges and potential pitfalls. Here are some of the top mistakes transfer students tend to make and the best ways to avoid them.

Mistake #1: Not visiting campus

Transfer students often choose not to visit schools because they feel it's unnecessary. You've already done this once, so no need to do it again, right? Wrong! Now that you're looking to transfer to a four-year institution, it's time to visit and see what else is out there. The best way to determine if a college is the right fit for you is to visit its campus. And if you have never made an official visit to a college, now is definitely the time! (More information provided in original article - scan QR code above.)

Mistake #2: Applying too late

Many students wait to send in their transfer applications, perhaps because they haven't felt urgency from their two-year school. However, when you are looking to transfer, the ideal timeline would be to contact the schools you are interested in transferring to about one year to a year and a half in advance. That may sound like overkill, but the extra time will give you a cushion to work through any logistical problems you may encounter before you transfer. (More information provided in original article - scan QR code above.)

Mistake #3: Going it alone

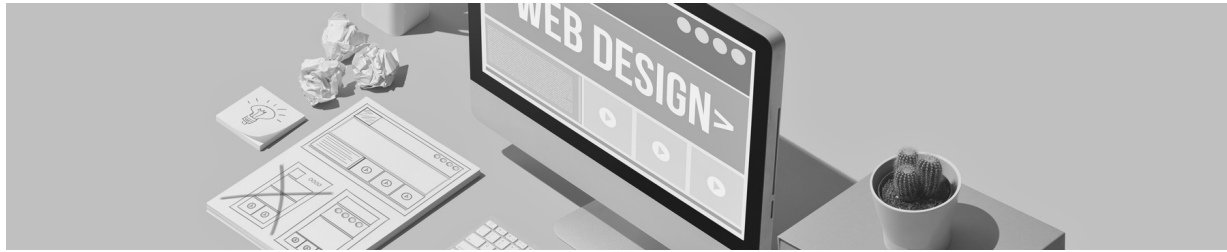

It's easy to distance yourself from your admission and/or transfer counselor and not ask questions, but you'd be doing yourself a great disservice! The admission counselor is your advocate at any college you hope to transfer into. It's great to have conversations with the advisors at your current institution too, but make sure you are reaching out to the admission departments at the schools you would like to transfer to as well. (More information provided in original article - scan QR code above.)

Mistake #4: Not filing the FAFSA

If you're currently attending a community college, you may be able to afford it by paying out of pocket. Perhaps you have not needed to file for financial aid, or you filed but did not receive anything while at your current school. This is typically not the case when transferring to a four-year institution. Apply as soon as possible once the FAFSA opens up on October 1 (prior to the year you plan to transfer and enroll). Some states offer their own grants with their own deadlines too, so don't miss out by not filing your FAFSA early! (More information provided in original article - scan QR code above.)

Mistake #5: Putting off figuring out living arrangements

Have you considered living in the dorms or getting an apartment close to campus? If this is something you're interested in, you need to make the decision sooner rather than later. Most residence hall contracts and deposits are due by May 1, but keep in mind that dorm space might be at a premium, so the sooner you decide the better. The same goes for apartments; many returning students sign their leases early in the year and perhaps up to a year in advance. Where you live will also be a factor in your financial aid award letter. (More information provided in original article - scan QR code above.)

HAS YOUR COMMUNITY COLLEGE UPDATED THEIR WEBSITE TO REFLECT THE RECENT CHANGE FROM “STARS” TO “ALABAMA TRANSFERS?”

In November of 2022, we launched the new Alabama Transfers website which replaced the old STARS website. One thing that is helpful to transfer students across the state is having the ability to find out more about Alabama Transfers and to see how obtaining an official transfer guide can help them save time, money, and credits should they choose to transfer to any of our public four-year universities in Alabama. Recently, we went through each of the participating community college websites to determine if they had updated their sites to reflect the change from STARS to Alabama Transfers. Here is what we found:

- ✔ BEVILL STATE COMMUNITY COLLEGE
- ✔ BISHOP STATE COMMUNITY COLLEGE
- ✔ CALHOUN COMMUNITY COLLEGE
- 🔍 CENTRAL ALABAMA COMMUNITY COLLEGE
- ✔ CHATTAHOOCHEE VALLEY COMMUNITY COLLEGE
- ✔ COASTAL ALABAMA COMMUNITY COLLEGE
